* CGC Certification lets potential clients, the court system and the general public know I am held to specific standards of practice. * CGC Certification sets me apart from non-certified guardians as someone who has met nationally-recognized requirements, had guardianship training and passed an examination. * CGC Certification identifies me as an individual qualified to serve as a fiduciary, as someone who can be entrusted with financial affairs. * CGC Certification is required to practice as a guardian in some states.
If you are a CGC Certified Guardian living and practicing in Idaho and move to Nevada, you may begin to practice without delay. If you are not a CGC Certified Guardian, you cannot. Why? Because Nevada requires a professional guardian to be certified by the CGC. How does a CGC Certified Guardian respond to a question about his specific qualifications to be a guardian? He answers, “I am certified by the Center for Guardianship Certification, a national organization that ensures its Certified Guardians meet certain qualifications and that they adhere to specific standards and ethics.” A Master Guardian in Chicago receives accolades from a family for her services to their aunt and they want her to help them find a similarly qualified guardian for their aunt in Iowa. What does the MG do? She logs on to the Center’s website and follows the link to “Locate Certified Guardians” and finds a list of Nationally Certified Guardians in Iowa. She knows she can trust these guardians share her standards, ethics and qualifications.
